WILL NOMINATEPRECINCT CLUB PROPOSES TO NAME CANDIDATES FOR DELEGATES ON WEDNESDAY.

The second precinct of the Fourth District held a meeting last night to consider the matter of nominations for the primary next week. The club didn't approve the action of the Central Committee in providing for nominations of delegates to the convention only one day before the voting. In fact club decided practically to refuse to follow this plan and will meet early in the week to consider nominees, meeting again on Friday to formally name them.

The meeting was held at the residence of C. M. White. There was a good deal of discussion of methods of selecting good men and sentiment was shown in favor of having the club's delegates to the convention pledged to vote for suitable candidates. Another meeting for which J. A. Gilman offered the free use of his tent, is to be held next Wednesday evening.

The election of officers resulted in the following being chosen: President J. H. Soper, First Vice President Hiram Kolomoku, Second Vice-President M. A. Gonsalves, Secretary George B. McClellan, Assistant Secretary H. E. Murray, Treasurer J. A. Gilman, Judges of Election John Underkirk, H. Tarlton and J. H. Soper, Executive Committee W. T. Rawlins, C. B. Wilson, Frank Krueger, George Sea and J. U. Joseph.

RELIC OF THE ANDRE AIRSHIP

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 11.—What is believed to be a relic of the ill-starred Andre balloon expedition to the North Pole was brought to Vancouver by a returned prospector and miner, who has spent the last four years in the wilds of the Mackenzie basin and other districts of the unknown North, both east and west of the Rocky mountains.

A. B. Keeler, who four years ago set out by way of Edmonton to follow the great water courses of the Mackenzie river to the Arctic circle, arrived in this city today and brought with him a portion of silk, such as was used by Andre in the construction of his balloon. Keeler tells in a most interesting manner how the precious little three-cornered fragment came into his possession.

He and one companion were at the headwaters of the Mackenzie river and decided to leave the route ordinarily traveled and strike due west to the unexplored regions under the shadow of the Rockies. After some days of rough and painful progress they at last reached a sort of valley or inclosed plateau not far from the mountains and right under the Arctic circle.

Here they met some Indians, who invited them to their village, which was in the plain, but which had never been visited by white men before. The Indians, by signs and otherwise, made it clear that they had never seen a white man but once before. Though the two explorers were unable to understand a word of the dialect spoken by the red men, and the latter could not, of course, understand them, it was at last made evident that these isolated Indians had seen a white man, and that under such extraordinary circumstances that it was a lively recollection to them.

To explain how they had seen the other white man, one of the Indians insisted on taking Keeler to a spot some distance from the village. Through fear of being separated from his companion and not knowing the motive of the Indian, Keeler was unwilling, but at last accompanied the Indian. When they had reached a spot on a little eminence over a mile from the Indian encampment, the native stopped, and in sign language, emphatically repeated over and over, showed Keeler where the other mysterious white man had landed.

From oft-repeated signs, Keeler could gather that the white man had come down from the clouds in a great machine of wonderful construction, such as the Indian showed by signs that they had been greatly frightened by the sudden appearance of the man, whose skin, unlike theirs, was white, and, from the way he came, they concluded that he was a supernatural visitor.

It is from this same region that persistent rumors have come from the Indians, who asserted that they had seen the wonderful airship.

A. B. Keeler, a score of years ago, was one of the best-known followers of the turf in Eastern United States.
